Jim Pea and Charley Bell Had Trouble Over a Girl Sunday Afternoon.

BULLETS ALL WENT WIDE

Pea Bit Piece Out of Bell's Shoulder -One Bullet Struck the Newman Home.

While others were celebrating the Fourth with shooting crackers, one young man living in the west part of the city observed the day by shooting-with intent to kill-at his halfbrother. Sunday afternoon about two o'clock a brawl began to brew near the J. M. & I. depot. Those on the spot say the trouble between Charley Bell and Jim Pea, halfbrothers, arose over a dispute about a woman-both loved the same girl. Following a warm altercation the two came to blows. REFORM IN CONSTANTINOPLE. Filthiest City to Be Rebuilt Along Lines of Beauty.

There is to be a new Constantinople which will rival the architectural glories of the old Byzantium. The Young Turk committee in order to demonstrate to the populace the reality of the reforms of the new regime has called J. Bouvard, the eminent director of public works architecture in Paris, to lay out a modern city, with boulevards, parks, sewers, markets, slaughter houses and notably with three triumphal roads running to Stamboul, Pera and Scutari, says a Paris cable Constantinople recently, where he made careful studies as to the possibil- Doyle and Sweeney. ities of transforming "the filthiest city in the world" into a modern capital. His plans have been accepted by the Young Turks, and work will be begun immediately on the public markets.

Concessions are to be granted for the establishment of huge slaughter houses, the only conditions being that the buildings must conform to M. Bouvard's architectural plans. The Turkish engineers will carry out the work of providing sewers, electric lights, gas and water. These will be the first public undertakings, and everything will be intrusted to natives, as in the Hamidian regime.

When asked what would become of the famous street dogs of Constantinople when he had cleaned up the city, M. Bouvard replied:

"That is really a more difficult problem than one would think. The dogs of Constantinople are legendary. The Turks are used to their coming and going and, being grateful for the services they render, would not permit a brutal clearing out of the historic four footed scavengers.

"On the other hand, when the garbage is collected according to my plan and not permitted to be cast into the streets the now starving dogs will become dangerous, and it will be impossible to let them rove free, as in the past. The Young Turk committee finds the dog question more serious than that of Crete and has held many meetings to discuss it. The probable outcome will be that all the dogs will be transported to an island near Constantinople, where they will form a canine colony or republic. ENGAGED BY COMPOSER THERE

To Sing at Famed Concerts Including Two at the White House Each Season.

A special story from New York City to the Indianapolis News about Carl Morris, formerly of this city, appeared last night together with a picture of the Rush county baritone who is making good in Gotham. The story follows:

"The brilliant future predicted by so many friends of Carl Morris, of Indianapolis, barytone, formerly a member of the faculty of the Metropolitan school of music, promises to be realized early in his New York career. Mr. Morris has just been engaged by Bruno Siegfried Huhn, the noted composer, teacher and organist, to do public work at his concerts next season, taking the place of Francis Rogers, who goes on a tour with Madame Sembrich. Mr. Huhn always gives two concerts each season at the White House.

"A successful concert was given by Mr. Morris recently at Wells college, and he has been engaged for another next year. He has sung before many prominent societies and clubs, the fashionable Eclectic being one of the latter, during this his first season in New York.

"Mr. Morris holds three church positions, singing at the Jewish synagogue each Saturday and the Central Presbyterian church in West Fifty-seventh street, Manhattan, at morning and evening services Sunday. Sunday afternoons he sings at

"Mr. Morris is probably better known in Indianapolis by his full first name of Don Carlos. He expects to leave for a visit in Indianapolis and Rushville in a few weeks."

A special session of the circuit court will be called next Monday when a very interesting matter will be disposed of. Special Judge C. T. It is hoped that Judge Hanna will give a favorable decision for no one doubts that the city is far behind in Mrs. Sam Beaver, in Noble township, the matter of good streets, and the Three Mile law is an equitable manner of making the improvement, as the entire township is assessed, not making it burdensome on anyone. The county commissioners have been roundly criticized for their action in this case, as they have granted petitions where the improvement was to be made in the country. Miles and miles of streets have been built in Indiana cities-progressive citiesunder this law, but for some reason or another the commissioners here were of the opinion that the law was

The ones opposed to the improvement—that is, most of them—are a lot of old fogies who do not care whether the city advances, in fact, they would rather see it stand still or even go back. Most of them are living on Easy street and are among the wealthiest men in the county. But they oppose anything and everything. The people here are fast learning not to value their opinion in public matters for they are narrow, prejudiced and above all, selfish.

A handsome young soldier of fortune, a princess of enchanting beauty, two eccentric adventurers who leave wills disposing of the island of Japat and its ruby mines, two heirs who must first place, Skaggs was not an intimarry within a year to inherit that they are already married, in New York. He had no right to a shrewd American lawyer, a scheming British solicitor, a and a horde of fanatical Moslems who will inherit the riches of Japat provided the heirs do not marry each other - these are the leading characters in a romance which for genuine novelty, thrilling and unusual situations, live American humor and the pathos of a great but apparently hopeless love has rarely been equaled and never surpassed.

CHAPTER I.

THE LATE MR. SKAGGS. THE death of Taswell Skaggs was stimulating, to say the least, inapplicable though the expression may seem. He attained the end of a hale old age by tumbling aimlessly into the mouth of a crater on the island of Japat, somewhere in the mysterious south seas. The world had quite thoroughly forgotten him during the twenty odd years immediately preceding his death. It was, however, noticeably worth while to remember him at this particular time. He left • a last will and testament that bade fair to distress as well as startle a ed to groan.

Before them on the table lay the constupendous letter from their London correspondents and with it a copy of Taswell Skaggs' will. Mr. Bowen recently had been named as joint executor of the will, together with Sir John Allencrombie of London, W. C., one time neighbor of the late Mr. Skaggs. A long and exasperating cablegram had touched somewhat irresolutely upon the terms of the will, besides notifying him that one of the heirs resided in Boston. He was instructed to apprise this young man of his good

There was one very important, perhaps imposing, feature in connection with the old gentleman's will-he was decidedly sound of mind and body when it was uttered.

When such astute lawyers as Bowen & Hare give up to amazement, the usual forerunner of consternation, it is high time to regard the case as startling.

"Read it again, Bowen."

"The will?"

"No; the letter." Whereupon Mr. Bowen again read aloud the letter from Bosworth, Newnes & Grapewin, this time slowly and speculatively.

"They seem as much upset by the situation as we," he observed reflectively.

"Extraordinary state of affairs, I must say."

"And I don't know what to do about it. I don't even know how to begin. They're both married."

"And not to each other." "She's the wife of a Lord knows what of a lord, and he's married to an uncommonly fine girl, they say, notwithstanding the fact that she has larger social aspirations than he has

"And if that all important clause in the will is not carried out to the letter the whole fortune goes to the bowwows."

"Practically the same thing. He calls them 'natives;' that's all. It looks to me as though the bowwows liy that he hurried off to the dogs-and will get the old man's millions. I a goodly sized menagerie besides if the don't see how anything short of Providence can alter the situation."

"Thank heaven, Bowen, he names you as executor, not me."

"I shall decline to serve. It's an impossible situation, Hare. In the mate friend of mine. I met him in Constantinople five years ago and aftimpose upon me as if"-

"But why should you hesitate? You have only to wait for the year to roll pretty stenographer, a prince by and then turn your troubles over to who is musical and profligate the natives. Young Browne can't marry Miss Ruthven inside of a year simply because there is no Miss Ruthven. She's Lady-Lady-what's the name?"

"Deppingham."

"And Browne already has one Mrs. Browne to his credit, don't you see. Well, that settles it, I'd say. It's hardly probable that Browne will murder or divorce his wife, nor is it likely that her ladyship would have the courage to dispose of her incumbrance in either way on such short notice."

"But it means millions to them, Hare.'

"That's their unfortunate lookout. You are to act as an executor, not as a matrimonial agent."

"But, man, it's an outrage to give all of it to those wretched islanders. Bosworth says that rubles and sapphires grow there like mushrooms."

"Bosworth also says that the islanders are thrifty, intelligent and will fight for their rights. There are lawyers among them, he says, as well as jewel diggers and fishermen.'

"Skaggs and Lady Deppingham's grandfather were the only white men who ever lived there long enough to I could well afford to starve, and I the beautiful island of Japat, standing find out what the island had stored up wouldn't sell things, so I came away. like an emerald in the sapphire waters NNTICE DAILLER for civilization. That's why they bought it outright, but I'm hanged if I can see why he wants to give it back to the natives."

"Perhaps he owes it to them. He doubtless bought it for a song, and, contrary to all human belief, he may have resurrected a conscience. Anyhow, there remains a chance for the heirs to break the will."

"It can't be done, Hare; it can't be done. It's as clean an instrument as ever survived a man."

It is by this time safe for the reader to assume that Mr. Taswell Skaggs had been a rich man and therefore Without seeking to further involve privileged to be eccentric. He came of bit above his station. His wife was serv-"Pretty badly tangled, I declare," ing as governess in the home of a cerand dragged her from the exalted posi-"Hopelessly," agreed Mr. Bowen, tion of minding other people's children very much as if he had at first intend- into the less conspicuous one of caring for her own.

Their only son was killed by a runtents of a bulky envelope, a long and away horse when he was twenty, and their daughter became the wife of an American named Browne when she was scarcely out of her teens. It was then that Mr. Skaggs, practically childless, determined to make himself wifeless as well.

He magnanimously deeded the unentailed farm to his wife, turned his securities into cash and then set forth upon a voyage of exploration. It is common history that upon one dark, still night in December he said goodby forever to the farm and its mistress, but it is doubtful if either of them heard him.

To be "jolly well even" with him Mrs. Skaggs did a most priggish thing. She died six months later, but before doing so she made a will in which she left the entire estate to her daughter, effectually depriving the absent husband of any chance to reclaim his Taswell Skaggs was in Shanghai when he heard the news. It was on a Friday. His informant was that erstwhile friend Jack Wyckholme. Naturally Skaggs felt deeply aggrieved with the fate which permitted him to capitulate when unconditional surrender was so close at hand. His language for one brief quarter of an hour did more to upset the progress of Christian endeavor in the far east than all the idols in the Chinese empire.

"There's nawthin' in England for me, Jackie. My gal's a bloomin' foreigner by this time, and she'll sell the bleedin' farm, of course. She's an American, God bless 'er 'eart. The subject of the hearing was the use of soda, potash, ammonia, alum and other chemicals in food and the effect of the use of such ingredients on the health of the consumer.

The board granted hearings to the representatives of manufacturers, who contended that the use of small quantities of chemicals is needed to insure the preservation of food in proper condition and that such use in not detrimental to health. Persons who rushed to the scene pulled him away from the wire with a pole, and, although unconscious and apparently dead at first, Hardman is now showing no ill effects from the 2,000 volts except severe burns. When the wire and the man were parted there was a report which could be heard for several blocks.

A doctor was summoned quickly and at first examination the man was given up for dead. Every known method was used, and after an hour's hard work the victim began to show signs of life. He was then removed to his

When asked if it was heat or nervous prostration, one replied: "Oh, very much more serious than that." He said that acute mental worry was the cause of his condition, but when asked if the trouble was mental, physical, or both, he declined to answer the question at all. It is understood that Mr. Whittaker's ailment is acute mental trouble.

RELIGIOUS TOLERATION

President Taft Has a Word to Say In This Regard.

Norwich, Conn., July 6.-President Taft was the chief figure yesterday in the celebration of the 250 anniversary of this historic old New England town. In an address to the people, after a fine military parade and civic display, the president finding a theme in the church influence in the foundation of Norwich, took occasion to express his views on the liberty of religious belief.

He pleaded that every man be allowed to worship God in his own way. The president declared amid laughter that the American forefathers came to this country ostensibly to escape religious intolerance, but as a matter of fact in order that they might follow out their own religious ideas in their own way and with a large degree of intolerance toward any other form of belief.

"We have passed beyond that now," said the president, 'and are coming more and more to realize the right of the individual to wcrship God as he may choose." The president left late last night for Albany, N. Y., where he was joined today by other prominent guests enroute to the tercentenary celebration at Lake Champlain.

SETTLED IT BY A COMPROMISE

How Close Question Involving Saloons Was Adjusted.

Columbus, Ind., July 6 .- Thomas E. Reidenbach, a local saloon keeper, and the Civic League have compromised their differences. By the terms of agreement Reidenbach will close his saloon next Oct. 8, and in the meantime he will not be prosecuted. Reidenbach has a liquor license issued to him last Nov. 29. He says the license was granted Nov. 6 and dated ahead, and insisted that he had a right to run until Nov. 29.

The Civic League instructed its attorneys to investigate the case and the attorneys decided to file an affidavit charging him with running a blind tiger. There was a close legal question involved, as the whole contention hinged on whether or not the license could be regarded as having been granted before or after Nov. 20, the held that the local option law became effective. Four other saloons will quit business here Oct. 8, and Reidenbach agreed to close when they did. That will mark the end of saloons in this
